For Immediate Release

The hour long documentary, "The Priest of Myoshinji", which was filmed last year by WKYC's award-winning Montage unit, will be presented again at the Cleveland Museum of Art on August 15 and August 22 at 2:30 p.m..

The film describes the way in which works of art find their way into a museum. In particular, the film focuses on the Cleveland Museum's Director, Dr. Sherman E. Lee and the Curator of Chinese painting, Wai-kam Ho, as they travel to the Far East in search of works of art worthy to be included in the Museum's highly esteemed Oriental collection.

The film will be shown in color on a large screen in the Museum's Lecture Hall, on the classroom level of the Education Wing. Admission is free to the public.
